remarkable culinary speakers: Marino
Monferrato from Hell's Kitchen, and Malibu Seaside Chef Gina Clarke!

If you think you have seen Marino Monferrato before, you probably have—at least if you watch the hit culinary show Hell’s Kitchen with Chef Gordon Ramsay. Marino has served as the show’s maître d’hôtel for the past 12 seasons, making him a household face for many since 2013.

“In Los Angeles, it seems that everyone is an actor who works in a restaurant,” Marino says. “I’m the opposite—a restaurant guy who was picked to be in a television show.”

Marino is now a fixture at DAOU as well, serving as our vice president of hospitality operations. A native of Torino in northern Italy’s Piemonte wine region, Marino brings an effortless charm and a deep hospitality expertise to his role at DAOU, which includes working at some of the world’s finest restaurants.

Gina Clarke, a California Native, started her career studying at the French Epicurean School in Los Angeles. She had her apprenticeship under renowned Chef Guiliano Bugialli from Florence, as well as at Wolfgang Puck’s Malibu restaurant Granita. Currently she is a private chef working with CEO’s, movie stars, musicians and world-class athletes.

“I understand the importance of a meal beyond the food, but as an experience. I am passionate about providing quality ingredients and services to host a best-in-class dining experience” -Clarke
